

2012: The End or a New Beginning?

Since the past decade, the theme “2012” has aroused the curiosity of many, including scientists, governments and nations. Recent scientific findings corroborate with the prophecies of ancient civilisations that 2012 will be the year when the Earth will suffer the most: increased number of earthquakes, storms, tsunamis, wars of extreme violence and so on. Paradoxically, the whole of humanity is dreading the mysterious date of 21st December 2012 as stated in the Mayan calendar while the process of cataclysmic occurrences has begun since a long time.

In many parts of the planet, we hear of famine, overpopulation, chemical weapons, advanced nuclear technology, hole in the ozone layer, global warming, desertification and so on, but no one is willing to act against it. Moreover, NASA warns of super solar storms that can cause much havoc in 2012. Despite knowing the drastic consequences that could afflict humanity, why are we blindly paving our way towards misery, suffering and annihilation?

We are facing radical circumstances - so, a radical change is what we badly need. We have to act! It is now or never!

A world of peace and harmony sounds utopian right now but is certainly possible if each one of us is ready to shun social conditionings and to transcend weaknesses such as selfishness, jealousy, hatred, anger, greed and violence, present in each of us.

It will be a unique occasion for all of us to discover how we can change ourselves and master our emotions instead of being a slave to them. The basis of a sane society depends on each and every individual.

In view of the high importance of the above regarding the future of our planet, the SDSE, in collaboration with the Know Thyself UNESCO Club, is organising an exhibition on ‘2012: The End or a New Beginning?’. Through this exhibition, we intend to sensitise the youths of the university that we have the possibility to change the fate of the world. This positive change can be brought about only through a complete transformation of the mind of the present generation.

We therefore have much pleasure to invite you to the exhibition which will be held on Thursday 23rd and Friday 24th of September 2010 from 10.00 to 16.00 at the Raised Plaza at the University of Mauritius.
